

Lights, Camera, Hot Rods!

Some of the most well known rod shops of the '40s and '50s sprang from the fertile soil of Southern California. Every once in a while we still hear about a new joint starting to make a name for itself. One example is Hollywood Hot Rods (HHR), which recently opened for business in Burbank, California (not Hollywood...go figure). Shop owner Troy Ladd has a background in business and a passion for speed and has combined the two with a shop catering to style and speed, be it a chopped and channeled Model A or a nitrous-injected 5.0 Mustang.

HHR features a fabrication shop, engine and chassis assembly clean room, a fully stocked retail showroom, and a handful of experienced and talented wrenchmen. Did we mention that Troy is also a Young Gun?
